R. W. LADENBURG, BALLISTICS EXPERT

Retired Professor of Research Physics at Princeton Dies—Decorated During War.

Special to The New York Times.
PRINCETON, N. J., April 4—Dr. Rudolf Walter Ladenburg, retired Research Professor of Physics at Princeton University, died here last night in the Princeton Hospital at the age of 69.

Dr. Ladenburg had been a consultant to the ballistics research laboratory of the Aberdeen (Md.) Proving Ground and the United States Naval Ordnance laboratory. He was decorated by the Government in 1948 for outstanding contributions to the scientific research program.

His research field was wide, ranging from atomic problems and the development of methods of studying air streams traveling at supersonic speeds to the use of light rays as a means of measurement.

When he retired two years ago, Dr. Ladenburg was the recipient of special honors at a physics symposium attended by seventy-five leading scientists.

Born in Kiel, Germany, he received a Ph. D. degree from Munich University. Dr. Ladenburg did postgraduate work at Cambridge and served as a professor at Breslau and the University of Berlin before coming in 1931 to this country, where he became Cyrus Fogg Brackett Professor of Physics at Princeton.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Else Utthoff Ladenburg; a son, Kurt, of Cincinnati, and two daughters, Mrs. Fritz Eichenberg of Tuckahoe, N. Y., and Mrs. Eva Marie Mayer of Souderton, Pa.
